

Says

Thinks

India has a federal form of government, and hence each state also has its own government. The executive of each state is the governor (equivalent to the president of India), whose role is ceremonial.

Polls are about to open to as many as 900 million people in the world's largest democracy. The elections follow a year in which most Indian adults showed dissatisfaction with the nation's progress on issues including unemployment, inflation and the efficacy of elections. Even prior to the Pulwama attack in Indian-administered Kashmir, majorities of Indians voiced concern about terrorism and the threat posed to their country by Pakistan.

The functioning of the political system is crucial for the smooth development of any country. India is no different. From being the largest democracy in the world and having the Prime Minister as the supreme leader of the country, Indian politics has its own charisma.

India is the largest democracy in the world. Almost 1 out of every 6 humans in the world is an Indian. With such an enormous and diverse population, there are a number of political ideologies and political parties which are present and functioning all over the country. The constitution of India gives the right to every citizen of the country to form political parties and contest elections in the country.

But there are signs of public unease. About two-thirds of Indians (66%) believe that today's children will be better off than their parents. But that optimism is down 10 percentage points

Indians with at least a secondary education are significantly more worried about corrupt officials than the less educated. Notably, there is little partisan difference in views of these problems.

Political juggernauts; A quantitative analysis of candidates in the 2019 lok sabha election

Politics is a field associated with a lot of negativity, frequently linked with terms such as corruption, greed, and nepotism. However, the role of politics is a noble and an ancient one, around since the first formation of societies

When thinking about their own parties, substantial majorities of both Democrats (73%) and Republicans (64%) say their parties make them feel hopeful. But far fewer say their own parties stir feelings of enthusiasm or pride

To bring about a change in society, and subsequently, the state and the nation, the passion to do so has to come from within, especially from the youth. Engineers and civil service personnel have their own place, as do the armed forces, farmer

In recent times, there has been an increasing trend of people from non-political backgrounds joining the field of politics and achieving considerable success. So, if you too have your eyes set on becoming one, you should give this article a read.

As part of the study of emotions and politics, this book explores connections between affect and cognition and their implications for political evaluation, decision and action. Emphasizing theory, methodology and empirical research, Feeling Politics is an important contribution to political science, sociology, psychology and communication

Though the public is unhappy with government generally, Americans are largely divided on key measures of their ability to influence how it runs, including the impact of voting on government and the ability of motivated individuals to influence the way government

Does

Feels